

Adriane Casalotti, MPH, MSW, is Chief of Government and Public Affairs at the National Association of County and City Health Officials (NACCHO), where she leads policy development, government relations, advocacy, marketing, communications, media relations, and external affairs in support of the nation's local health departments. She joined NACCHO in 2018 after serving at the Food and Drug Administration and in senior congressional roles focused on health policy. She holds master's degrees in social work and public health from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and a bachelor's degree in government with a minor in Chinese language from the College of William & Mary.