ASCH Learning Contract

About the Learning Contract

Completion of this Learning Contract is the first step in meeting the required 20 hours of Individual Consultation. The candidate will identify learning objectives, to be shared with their selected Approved Consultant. Through this contract the following objectives: a.) provides the candidate and the Approved Consultant a plan and direction for their individualized program and ensures the use of their contact hours are maximized; b.) enables a focused approach in monitor progress as each objective is addressed and met.

This document includes:

- Example: Comprehensive Completed Learning Contract
- Learning Contract Worksheet
- Consultation Contract
- Consultation and Learning Contract Verification Form

Rules for Individual Consultation

- Contact hours between the candidate and Approved Consultant must be individualized instruction.
- Face-to-face training is strongly recommended, although not required.
- The twenty-hour training requirement can be done with one Approved Consultant or split among two or more Approved Consultants.
- This training cannot be provided or received as part of psychotherapy or professional treatment services.
- This training does not constitute clinical supervision and should not be represented as such by either the learner or Consultant.

Steps in Development of a Learning Contract

Step 1: Evaluate your learning needs. Define the gap between where you are and where you want to be.

Step 2: Specify learning objectives. You will find that some of what you need to learn involves the absorption of cognitive material, some involves attitudinal/affective change, and some requires you to master specific skills.

Step 3: Specify learning resources and strategies. List the precise resources that you will need to establish the desired competencies.

Step 4: Specify evidence of accomplishment. List what will demonstrate your accomplishment.

Step 5: Review your Contract with you ASCH Approved Consultant. Review is for the purpose of ascertaining that your contract addresses your needs in an optimal manner.
