Announcing a paradigmatic change in the approach to analyzing and teaching persuasion:

The Only Authentic Book of Persuasion: the Agenda-Spin Model by Richard E. Vatz

The book is the only work on persuasion that actually instructs readers step-by-step on how to persuade.

The book is the only work that explains major political wins and losses through persuasion

The book is endorsed by:

- 1. Bill Owens, the Executive Editor of "60 Minutes" for CBS News
- 2. Harrison Monarth, best-selling NEW YORK TIMES author
- 3. Trevor Melia, Emeritus of Rhetoric and Communication at the University of Pittsburgh
- 4. Dr. Thomas Szasz, the late pre-eminent international critic of persuasion and psychiatry

The author has spoken on the book in the University Address at Hillsdale College, University of Richmond, and the Agenda-Spin Model was the featured topic at the Southern States Communication Association's Keynote Address in 2013.

WELCOME FROM THE ECA DIRECTOR

Welcome to the 108th Eastern Communication Association Convention in Boston, Massachusetts! I grew up in Southern Maine, and have always thought of Boston as one of America's great cities. The convention staff here at the Omni Parker House, all of my Associate Program Planners and Interest Group Program Planners, and I want you to have the Freedom To explore this great conference and this great city. The Freedom Trail is just outside our doors, and can lead us into the city, just as it allows the city to come visit us at the Eastern Communication Association.

Over the next few days, I look forward to our discussions of what communication gives us the <Freedom> to do in our teaching, in our research, and in our society. I also look forward to what communication can give us <Freedom> from. Communication helps us negotiate the tensions in <Freedom> to promote the well-being of others and society, and I hope to be able to eavesdrop on as many of these conversations as possible.

After 18 months of planning to bring this convention to our membership, I can affirm that outstanding planners and interest group leaders can give us the Freedom To accomplish more than any of us working on our own. Our primary planning team was comprised of these generous individuals: Jason Edwards (Second Vice President, Local Arrangements,) Angela Cooke-Jackson (Second Vice President, Volunteer Coordinator), Nikki Blau (Director of Marketing/Sponsorship), Dante Morelli and Steve Granelli (Short Courses), Heather Ferrara and Valerie Lynn Schrader (Graduate Posters), and L. Meghan Mahoney (Social Media/Technology Coordinator). A special thanks is also necessary for Mary Mino and Tom Donlan, the planners for the James C. McCroskey & Virginia P. Richmond Undergraduate Scholars Conference, as they have brought a new generation of young scholars into the ECA, and for Angela Hosek, the planner of the Basic Course Conference. Without their dedication and effort, we would not have a convention.

In addition to my planning team, I also want to thank Immediate Past President J. Kanan Sawyer and President Jason Wrench for their encouragement and advice – and a few cautionary tales – over the past two years. Many of our past officers have also offered advice throughout this process. Our previous Executive Director, Ron Arnett, and our current Executive Director, Cheryl Casey, have also made sure that we have had the funding and logistics that we have need. Kathie Cesa, ECA Director of Member Services, is, perhaps, our most valuable player; her dedication to and experience with the ECA are the continuity that our organization needs. Lastly, I need to thank the faculty, staff, and students (and particularly Steve Granelli and Max Meler) of Ohio University for moments of support, encouragement, and occasional brute labor.

As the oldest Communication Association in existence, it is an honor to serve as this year's First Vice President and Primary Convention Planner. Enjoy our conference facilities (this is the hotel that invented both the Parker House roll and the Boston cream pie) and the surrounding area here in Boston (with great restaurants and other facilities right outside. Students from around Boston and the surrounding area have volunteered to help us explore Boston to the fullest. While you are about town, take full advantage of Boston's "Show Your Badge Program" and use your ECA badge to get discounts all around the city (<https://www.bostonusa.com/show-your-badge/>). Your badge also gets you discounts on food purchases right here in the hotel.

CONVENTION POLICY STATEMENTS

The Hyatt Regency is a non-smoking hotel, and the hotel staff will enforce this policy diligently.

ECA makes all reasonable accommodation for people with disabilities. Although the pre-registration form inquired about accommodations and needs, anyone who requires assistance should notify First Vice-President Jason S. Wrench as soon as possible. As an Association, we have a history of making our convention experience safe and convenient for all participants.

By registering for the 2016 ECA Convention, participants agree that they are responsible for providing their own insurance. They assume responsibility for their own risks in participation and thereby hold harmless ECA, its Executive Council, and other sponsors of this event.

ECA TECHNOLOGY POLICY

All requests for technology must have been by the Interest Group Program Planner at the time of final 2016 program submission (November 2015). Any requests made after that time cannot be honored. ECA is never able to approve requests for the following technology: Wi-Fi, personal computers, laser printers, satellite links, teleconference equipment, LCD panels, video data projects, and digital versatile/video disc equipment.

Although ECA members may wish to rent this equipment from the Hyatt Regency at their own expense, those individuals are responsible for the equipment, including protecting it from damage and theft. Further, ECA is not responsible for this equipment.

Finally, the hotel should not be expected to provide service for, or assistance with, personal technology that is brought into the hotel.

SHORT COURSES AT A GLANCE

Friday 7:45-9:15

3.1.11

King

Short Course 1: Freedom to Innovate: Using Digital Story Maps in Communication Courses

Coordinator: Jennifer Babcock, Bridgewater College

This short course will teach participants how to incorporate a “digital humanities” technique – story mapping – into their own classroom. Participants will learn the pedagogical value of incorporating digital projects in the college classroom; explore various ways that a mapping technology can be used in a communication classroom; create a digital story map of their own during an interactive tutorial (so bring a laptop!); and leave with a specific idea for incorporating a story map assignment into their own classroom. This is a 90-minute short course. Collection of papers on the intersectionality of identities and how they are perceived within dominant groups.

Saturday 9:30-11:00

4.2.10

King

Short Course 2: Bridging the “Mass” and “Interpersonal” Divide: Integrating Mediated Communication Courses in the Undergraduate Curriculum

Coordinator: David Keith Westerman, North Dakota State University
Nicholas David Bowman, West Virginia University
Kenneth Alan Lachlan, University of Connecticut

Courses on media and mass communication are a core element of many programs in communication study - such studies represent some of the earliest communication scholarship. Such courses commonly discuss critical technological advances, from the printing press to video games. However, some find it difficult to integrate discussions of the Internet into this curriculum, as the technology seems to fit both “mass” and “interpersonal” courses. In this 90-minute short course, we will discuss how a focus on “mediated communication” can help bridge this gap, using examples and course materials (as well as new technology) already in use.

Friday 12:15-3:15

3.4.11

King

Short Course 3: Exploring Strategies for Implementing Media Literacy into Existing Communication Courses

Coordinator: Jayne Cubbage, Bowie State University

In our ever-connected world media is everywhere. As such, many assume that we are all media savvy—we may be, but are we media literate? This 3-hour course seeks to free media professors of traditional curriculum constraints by incorporating media literacy into their existing assignments and class discussion, thereby fostering a greater understanding of media messages, production values and the intended meaning behind those messages. This course seeks to enable professors and students alike to take media education beyond mere imitation of media techniques and formats. Both groups will become more knowledgeable and aware media.

Friday 3:30-5:00

3.7.07

Brandeis

Short Course 4: Exercising Pedagogical Freedoms in Communication Classrooms: Using Media Based Pedagogies for Social Awareness?

Coordinator: Jack Banks, University of Hartford
Nancy Bressler, Wheeling Jesuit University

This 90-minute short course aims to investigate the changing landscape of media immersion through the use of media production in classroom contexts. As a pedagogical technique in a technology-saturated learning environment, this course considers the opportunities of implementing and creating media to address larger pedagogical goals, such as media literacy, critical thinking skills, active learning techniques. In support of ECA's theme of "Freedom," this course specifically seeks to address how teachers can engage their students in political and cultural awareness, through the production of media. We observe how these media based pedagogies freely promote student engagement in civic action!

Friday 3:30-4:45

3.7.10

King

Short Course 5: Event Planning: Communicating Theory and Practice

Coordinator: Leeanne Bell McManus, Stevenson University
Chip Rouse, Stevenson University
Stephanie Verni, Stevenson University

Event Planning: Communicating Theory and Practice offers a unique approach that connects concepts in communication to event planning. Event planners are given the freedom to create new ideas and enjoy freedom from prescriptive routines. Understanding the "why" behind successful events is key to creating a unique experience for clients. With a solid basis in communication theory, this short course will enable event planners to manage and coordinate events with clarity and precision. Case studies and examples of event planning will be connected to the field of communication, and participants will uncover how effective, thoughtful planning strategies will yield successful events.

Friday 9:30-11:00

3.2.11

King

Short Course 6: Diversity Within One Mountaineer Nation: Bringing a Freedom of Inclusiveness to the Media and Society Classroom

Coordinators: Elizabeth Oppe, West Virginia University
Egill Karlsson, West Virginia University
Seth Barbarow, West Virginia University

This 90-minute short course details the history of LGBTQ issues and inclusion in American society throughout the decades, beginning with the First National Gay Rights Organization founded in 1950 and finishing with the 2016 Summer Olympic Games and Orlando nightclub shootings. Notable definitions, the Kinsey (1948) Scale and the Rouchlin (1972) Heterosexual Questionnaire are examined, as along with Title IX and Title VII political and economic implications. The significance of how the media acts as an agent of sexuality socialization and gender identity is discussed, along with available campus resources for students, who may consider becoming an ally for the LGBTQ community.

Saturday 11:00-1:30

4.3.11

King

Short Course 7: Using Technology to Allow for and Encourage Faculty Voice in Decision MakingCoordinator: Nina Acquavita, Suffolk County Community College

The intent of this 90-minute short course is to examine some of the restrictions inherent in communication in a multi-campus and/or shared governance system. Communication allows the freedom to voice our ideas in departmental decision making as well as academic policies affecting ourselves and our students. Without using all communication tools necessary to create effective discussions, freedom to voice our ideas may be restricted. The content of this short course includes solutions for these restrictions and ideas for allowing the free exchange of ideas through the use of BlackBoard and SharePoint to allow for and encourage faculty participation in discussions."

Saturday 12:15-3:15

4.4.02

Lobby

Short Course 8: Teaching and Learning Rhetorics of Display in the FieldCoordinator: Lawrence Prelli, University of New Hampshire

This three-hour short course introduces participants to strategies for teaching analysis and interpretation of "display" rhetorics based on students' experiences with them outside the classroom. The course itself illustrates how to plan and conduct "field work" by positioning participants as students doing collaborative case studies of a variety of displays encountered during a round-trip walk from the convention hotel. Displays encountered range from an interpretive talk, through commemorative and memorial sites, to unofficial "vernacular" sites. The course concludes with a forty-minute planning session aimed at generating opportunities for participants to bring their students into the field. This planning session will occur in the Gardner Room, starting at about 2:00.

Plenary Workshop: Teaching Practice Enhancement in the Basic Course

Sponsor: Basic Course Conference

Pratt Bennet, Berklee College of Music

This workshop and interactive session will be led by Teacher Transformational Training (TTT) Co-Founder Pratt Bennet, Berklee College of Music, Boston, MA. This session will allow basic course instructors to engage with vexing issues they face in their classes. The workshop is designed to help each instructor design, experiment with, and refine more effective teaching tools for their specific courses and create plans to track their effectiveness. In addition to basic course instructors identifying and designing new ways to experiment with their courses, we also plan to propose a panel for ECA 2018 from this session that allows us to come back together to share our successes, learning opportunities, and revisions plans based on the experimentations we devise in this workshop.

Plenary Town Hall Debate: Freedom to Consider the Following...

Sponsor: Basic Course Conference

Moderator: Scott Myers, West Virginia University

Be it resolved: The Communication field must establish a Basic Communication Course that is consistent in content and format across colleges and universities.

"For the Affirmative"

Lynn H. Turner, Marquette University

Nancy J. Willets, Cape Cod Community College

David McMahan, Missouri Western State University

"For the Negative"

Rich West, Emerson College

Sara Weintraub, Regis College

Candice Thomas-Maddox, Ohio University, Lancaster

This animated and engaged town hall debate comprised of panelists who have served as past presidents of the Eastern Communication Association, the Central States Communication Association, and the National Communication Association will engage the following. This program examines the role that the Basic Communication Course (BCC) plays in the field of communication studies.

Specifically, this debate will look at two specific concerns related to the BCC: Content and Approach. Debaters will examine several questions, including: What should be taught in the BCC across various departments? Should the field be encouraging consistency in BCC content so that administrators and laypeople understand the field? What approach works best in the BCC? Hybrid? Public speaking? Theoretical? Interpersonal/Group/Team?

In the spirit of the old Town Hall debates, audience members will be involved in the debate, overtly demonstrating their support for one side or the other.

This panel is an invitation to explore the metaphors of "cultural civility" and "geo-epistemic responsibility" as potential responses to communicative incivility that occurs in intercultural encounters. We address the following question as it relates to the study and development of communication as a field of international and intercultural discourses: How can "cultural civility" and "communication as a discourse of geo-epistemic responsibility" offer freedom from rampant issues of communicative incivility and violence whilst preserving the essential thrust of freedom that is necessary for authentic communication between persons?

Flipping the Basics: Considering Flipped Classroom Methodologies in Basic Communication Courses

Flipped course methods grant instructors freedoms to do many productive things (e.g., focus on application, spend time interacting with students, etc.) and freedom from others (e.g., having to “perform” while lecturing, spending time repeating concepts from homework, etc.). This session presents the advantages and challenges of implementing flipped classroom methodologies in communication courses through detailing specific classroom strategies, discussing how to plan/train for flipping a course, and sharing ideas for gaining instructor and student buy-in.

This session applies theoretical tools from communication research contexts including team collaboration, visual aesthetics, political action, and propaganda analysis. Working within the fundamentally applied subfield of Environmental Communication, we demonstrate the utility of communication research for users working on practical issues including aquatic management, park recreation, agricultural recreation, and climate policy. In doing so, we seek freedom from theory that has limited application potential and freedom to promote sustainable practices that can build better futures.

Late night comedy shows often target political candidates during election years. This election was unique in that the candidates were largely unfavorable, there were an unusual number of pre-elections scandals (both real and, um, perhaps not entirely rooted in reality), and at least one candidate could not stop tweeting at 3 in the morning. This panel draws upon a variety of traditions to discuss past research on the impact of political comedy and apply the findings to this year's crop of television programs.

In conjunction with this year's theme of "<Freedom> to . . . <Freedom> from" this performance panel frames "freedom" as a hermeneutic of remembering and forgetting to undermine the idea of freedom as a stable, democratic trope. Each of the six performances contained within this panel complicate the idea of <freedom> as an ideograph—an abstract concept leveraged to crystalize political support and consensus. Here, performances of home, consumption, gender, affect, and disability serve as thematic from which to reflect on the relationships between memory, identity, and freedom.

Short Course 4: Exercising Pedagogical Freedoms in Communication Classrooms: Using Media Based Pedagogies for Social Awareness?

Sponsor: Short Courses

Chair: Jack Banks, University of Hartford

Respondent: Nancy Bressler, Wheeling Jesuit University

This 90-minute short course aims to investigate the changing landscape of media immersion through the use of media production in classroom contexts. As a pedagogical technique in a technology-saturated learning environment, this course considers the opportunities of implementing and creating media to address larger pedagogical goals, such as media literacy, critical thinking skills, active learning techniques. In support of ECA's theme of "Freedom," this course specifically seeks to address how teachers can engage their students in political and cultural awareness, through the production of media. We observe how these media based pedagogies freely promote student engagement in civic action!

Since Hofstede's (1986) article on cultural differences in teaching and learning first appeared, there have been numerous studies published suggesting that 'unconscious bias' occurs in hiring, evaluation, and promotion of professors in our institutions of higher education. In the Communication discipline, more and more women, underrepresented minorities, and international students are earning doctorates and are teaching and seeking tenure track positions. What is our responsibility, as communication scholars, knowing that empirical evidence shows routine discrimination in the process toward tenure and promotion? How can we use our knowledge of Intercultural and Cross-cultural Communication to advocate for positive change and parity? This roundtable discussion features female voices from a variety of academic positions, institution types, ages, races, and ethnicities, to offer a position on this question in an effort to make the unconscious conscious.

Event Planning: Communicating Theory and Practice offers a unique approach that connects concepts in communication to event planning. Event planners are given the freedom to create new ideas and enjoy freedom from prescriptive routines. Understanding the "why" behind successful events is key to creating a unique experience for clients. With a solid basis in communication theory, this short course will enable event planners to manage and coordinate events with clarity and precision. Case studies and examples of event planning will be connected to the field of communication, and participants will uncover how effective, thoughtful planning strategies will yield successful events.

Canary and Hause's (1993) article is one of the most cited in Communication Quarterly's history. Over 20 years later, the topic of sex differences is still a central concern among scholars. This session will update the arguments made by Canary and Hause. Specifically, the panelists will discuss current research regarding stereotypes of the sexes; the extent that statistical differences are conflated with practical significance; measurements of gender; and a dearth of theory, among other things.

This Courses on media and mass communication are a core element of many programs in communication study - such studies represent some of the earliest communication scholarship. Such courses commonly discuss critical technological advances, from the printing press to video games. However, some find it difficult to integrate discussions of the Internet into this curriculum, as the technology seems to fit both "mass" and "interpersonal" courses. In this 90-minute short course, we will discuss how a focus on "mediated communication" can help bridge this gap, using examples and course materials (as well as new technology) already in use.

"Negative: The 2016 Presidential Election Was NOT Detrimental to the Health of American Democracy"

David LeVasseur, West Chester University of Pennsylvania

Lisa Gring-Pemble, George Mason University

J. Kanan Sawyer, West Chester University of Pennsylvania

Arguments CAN be loud and animated and respectful. That is the aim of this panel as we face down the other side to determine how the 2016 Presidential Election impacted our democracy. One side will provide arguments that our system has taken a devastatingly permanent hit, while the other will argue that nothing of the sort has happened. Come join us in the festivities and be prepared to jump in!

Reflections on Freedom in Black Mirror

Sponsor: Communication and Technology

Chair: Kimberly J. Hannah-Prater, University of Maryland

Respondent: Joy Cypher, Rowan University

"Technological Presence and Freedom from Loss in 'Be Right Back' (Series 2, Episode 1)"

Kathleen F. Oswald, Villanova University

"Freedom from Moral Responsibility: Artificial Intelligence and 'White Christmas' (Series 3 – Episode 1)"

George W. Boone, Augustana College

"Going against 'The Grain': The Future of Interpersonal Surveillance? ('The Entire History of You' – Series 1, Episode 3)"

Anna K. Turnage, Bloomsburg University

This panel takes the BBC series Black Mirror as a site for exploring ways technology is imagined to provide "freedom from" the mundane, the unpleasant, and the difficult. Each paper takes up one specific episode. From the use of AI as an expendable proxy in "White Christmas" to a digital echo providing freedom from grief and loss in "Be Right Back," Black Mirror reflects the dark and entangled nature of technology, culture, and freedom.

Performance: Freedom from Unjust Poverty

Sponsor: Interpretation and Performance Studies

Chair: Jenny Warren, Collin College

Celeste Lacroix, College of Charleston

Carole Bennett, Oakland Community College

Michelle Wilcox, Crossroads Rhode Island

Amy Johnson, Eastern Michigan University Using excerpts from oral histories, information from Crossroads Rhode Island: the largest homeless services organization in Rhode Island, other government agencies, original poetry and fiction, this panel explores how the voices of poverty are portrayed and how they are rarely free from judgment and condemnation. Dr. Lacroix and Carole Bennett will perform excerpts of the work, "The Working Poor", an original compilation by Prof. Bennett which includes excerpts from Barbara Ehrenreich's book Nickel and Dimed: on Not Getting By in America, oral histories collected from students matriculating at Oakland Community College in Michigan, government and public information about the working poor.

In addition, Amy Johnson will perform her poem, Change. These performances will be interspersed with reflections and commentary from panelist Michelle Wilcox, who will offer observations about the realities of homelessness and living below the poverty line in America. Following the performances and reflections, we will open the floor to discussion about ways in which faculty in communication and performance courses might encourage student, campus and community engagement with poverty and homelessness.
