The importance of looking out for one another's safety is truly a sign of a mature and dedicated working environment. It's one thing to look out for your own safety but it takes it to a whole different level when you are committed to the point of looking out for your coworkers safety also.

How about you?

- * Do you guide coworkers on the correct way to complete a task safety when you see they are doing something unsafely?
- * Are you willing to approach a coworker on safety?
- * Are you afraid of confrontation?
