Medical Education Award Presented at EM Leadership Forum to Andrew M. King, MD, FACEP

Columbus, OH—On April 19, at the Emergency Medicine Leadership Forum, the Ohio Chapter of the American College of Emergency Physicians (Ohio ACEP) was pleased to present the 2016 Emergency Physician Medical Education Award to an outstanding physician educator, Andrew M. King, MD, FACEP.

The Emergency Physician Medical Education Award was established to recognize contributions to education in the field of emergency medicine. The honor is bestowed upon emergency physicians who have exhibited exemplary teaching skills, implemented an exceptional education program, or developed an innovative teaching model.

Dr. Andrew King, who is Assistant Residency Program Director at The Ohio State University Department of Emergency Medicine, meets and exceeds these criteria. As an instructor, he is greatly admired and respected among his residents and his peers. Over the course of his career, he has authored or co-authored more than two dozen publications. For most of these, he has enthusiastically involved residents in the educational experience and graciously shared authorship with residents and faculty alike – a testament to his generous spirit and his commitment to elevating those around him.

Dr. King was nominated by Dr. Nathan Finnerty on behalf of his fellow residents. In his nomination letter, Dr. Finnerty outlined Dr. King's contributions to The Ohio State University's Emergency Medicine Residency Program, including implementing a flipped classroom model for residency didactic curriculum and various other resident quality improvement projects, which his residents say have greatly impacted their education.

In their letter nominating Dr. King, his residents were enthusiastic in their praise, saying he goes above and beyond the call of duty as an academic clinician, is a fantastic role model for patient care and education, and never fails to make his residents feel safe to ask for help.

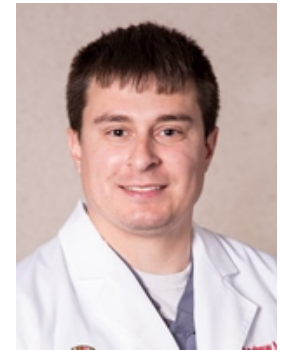

Ohio ACEP congratulates Dr. Andrew King for his well-deserved accolade!
