Should workers “friend”, “fan”, “follow”, or “like” their clients and their families on social media? Should workers “Google” clients to view information on their self-published social media pages? Should workers “troll” clients, even if on their own time and personal device? Do workers have the right to “post” their ideas as freely as anyone else? These and other questions will be explored in this look at cyber ethics and human services work with vulnerable population clients.

Warren County has developed a program based on a successful model launch in West Virginia called Handle With Care (HWC) tailored to reflect the needs and issues affecting children in Southwest Ohio. The no cost initiative, a result of a collaborative effort of key stakeholders and partners, builds upon the success of proven programs throughout the country. The goal of the initiative is to prevent children’s exposure to trauma and violence, mitigate negative affects experienced by children’s exposure to trauma, and increase knowledge and awareness of the issue. HWC promotes school-community partnerships aimed at ensuring that children who are exposed to trauma in their home, school, or community receive appropriate interventions to help them achieve academically at their highest levels and succeed in school despite whatever traumatic circumstances they may have endured. Regardless of the source of trauma, the common thread for effective intervention is school. Research now shows that trauma can undermine children's ability to learn, form relationships, and function appropriately in the classroom.

Learn about and see a demonstration of Oh SNAP, ODJFS' new mobile phone app for current and prospective SNAP recipients! Experience a new tool to recommend to clients! The app was developed to make comprehensive information on SNAP and other food programs readily accessible to users at all times. It emphasizes the consequences of untimely and inaccurate reporting: case closure, benefit under- or overissuance, and the requirement to repay overissuances. Why should this matter to county agency staff? It may reduce client-caused errors by reminding recipients of what they need to do, when, and may reduce county workloads by encouraging client communication and responsiveness and reducing investigations and benefit recovery work. Download the 'Oh SNAP' app from the PlayStore (Android) or AppStore (iOS) before the session and follow along with the demo.

708: Community Well-Being: SMS Engagement Solution (Technology Track)

Most family crisis projects in the Smart City Community are reactive, but there is a tremendous need for a more proactive and interactive approach to the broader problem. Traditional software lacks the ability to identify and engage at-risk individuals and their families since it relies on user data from questionnaires or social media during the on-boarding process. Neither of these on-boarding methods is conducive and not likely to identify and engage at-risk users and their families.

Participants will learn about a dedicated citizen engagement and community well-being application created by CBTS that would fill the gap and provide a mechanism ideally suited to this type of engagement, which would initially function to address family crisis and opioid needs; Non-life threatening situations like family counseling/support, missing child, needle exchange, rehab/recovery, treatment follow up messaging and many more can be efficiently and discretely messaged to a 24/7 counseling services call center. Originally developed in 2017 for the Cleveland RTA as a method to engage with their riders to improve public safety, the service allows customers to use their cell phones to SMS text public safety concerns directly to police dispatchers and others. Since the solution relies on SMS text messaging technology, and not applications that rely on data plans, this can have a much broader appeal.

Presenter: John Putnam (CBTS)

710: Secondary Traumatic Stress and Resiliency Strategies (Admin Track)

All social service providers are exposed to secondary traumatic stress (STS). We seem to understand that workers who engage directly with the children and families in the child welfare system are exposed to STS, but we tend not to acknowledge the workers exposed "behind the scenes"; the ones who answer the phones, complete data entry, listen to supervisee stories, or simply see folks in our waiting rooms. STS, the result of being exposed to other people's trauma, causes the same symptoms as PTSD and negatively impacts both our personal and professional lives. This session will use guidelines from the National Child Traumatic Stress Network to help define STS and other related terms and conditions. Participants will be introduced to the PROQOL5: Compassion Satisfaction & Fatigue, a scale to measure professional quality of life. We'll identify strategies to build resiliency and address STS, first at the organizational level, then at the personal level, for both prevention and intervention. We'll wrap up with a self-care assessment, which offers participants an opportunity to identify an area to improve and increase their own resiliency.
