PGxCheck...What is my DNA saying?

"Whether or not we know the specifics, our genetic "predisposition" is there.

The question is, do we take the opportunity to use the information...

We will have the opportunity to use the information as personalized medicine becomes the standard."

- DFK

Home - PGxCheck

About DFK

Links: Articles About PGx

Welcome

Personalized medicine is here. It is in its infancy and we all will watch it grow. From healthcare professionals to the general public, personalized medicine will present a learning curve. This blog is meant to help move everyone, including myself, along that learning curve. As I learn what my genome is telling me...and what it is not telling me, I will share it with you. I will have comments and I am sure, many questions. I sincerely hope you will contemplate the information, formulate your thoughts, and contribute to this educational experience. So, please join me on this journey as I uncover my genetic predisposition!

While I am openly sharing my information, privacy related to personal genetic information is the standard. If you have questions about genetic information and privacy, click here.

Coming January 2012

An Ohio Pharmacist will share his DNA information to prompt discussion of the science, application, ethics, law and other pertinent topics related to "personal genomics".

What will he find? How will he react?

Join in and follow the discussion!

Follow him on Twitter® @pgxcheck and follow the blog at pgxcheck.com!