

Welcome to the 18th Biennial Conference
and 50th Anniversary Celebration of the Rhetoric Society of America

May 30 – June 3, 2018
Downtown Minneapolis Hilton | Minneapolis, Minnesota

Welcome to the Conference

On behalf of the Board of Directors and the many volunteers who make our Society possible, we would like to welcome you to the 18th biennial conference and 50th Anniversary celebration of the Rhetoric Society of America. We have returned to the city where RSA began, Minneapolis, to continue our traditions and to make some new ones. This landmark moment arrives amid an academic resurgence in the scope and study of rhetoric, as well as a keen public awareness of its uses and misuses. The Society has never been stronger or larger and has experienced a continuous diversification of its members and their scholarship. The next few days will be a time to consider where we have been and how we will (re)invent our future.

Few rhetorical concepts utilize the past or consider the future more readily than invention. Invention recognizes the radical specificity that surrounds rhetorical practice, moments that are bound to time and location but demand that a speaker move within or beyond those limits to propose what might become. Invention invites dialogue with others, calling people to deliberate, debate, dispute, and even dissent. Invention works best when it is multi-vocal and inclusive, incorporating the interests of everyone who will bear the consequences of action or inaction, silence or sound. Invention is the promise of change, the possibility that our world can be better. Invention is the labor of a single moment and an ongoing, iterative process that reconsiders identity, knowledge, and position. Invention is re-invention, a rhetorical habit that furthers the conversation that always proceeds us and will remain long after we have left.

This year marks RSA's Golden Anniversary, so it's appropriate to consider the treasures we have amassed. We have a widely read and respected journal that publishes first-rate scholarship on an immense variety of topics. Our biennial conference has grown in size and depth to rival any gathering of rhetoricians on the planet. We have supplemented the conference with the wildly popular Summer Institutes, which bring new and established members of the field into close conversation and serve as crucibles for disciplinary invention. The RSA has provided a space in which rhetoric scholars from diverse traditions — especially communication, composition/English, classics, and contemporary theory — can develop connections and a common framework for a dialogue about rhetorical theory, criticism and practice. Rhetoricians from RSA have, over the decades, brought the rhetoric of and by women, African-Americans, Latinx, disabled, Asian and LGBTQ peoples into the center of criticism and theory. Not only has the study of Greco-Roman traditions never been healthier, RSA scholars are pursuing research into international and decolonized forms of rhetoric, paths which represent well our collective future.

The co-directors of this conference are grateful to the generous sponsors and volunteers that have made this event possible. We thank the co-directors of RSA 2016--Greg Clark, RSA President, Cara Finnegan, and Jenny Rice for their invaluable advice. We thank Kathie Cesa of KOC Member Services, Jasmin Miles of Experient, Inc., and Jerry Hauser, RSA Executive Director for helping us with the details that make a conference function. We thank Jessica Kurr (post-doctoral teaching fellow at PSU), Stephanie Larson (graduate student at UW Madison), Mary Clinkenbeard (graduate student at UW Milwaukee), and Caroline Koons (graduate student at PSU) for their assistance developing the program. We are grateful to John Logie, our local host from the University of Minnesota, for his assistance with the Thursday evening reception at the Weismann Museum and the Coffman Memorial Union.

Finally, we are thankful for all of the reviewers, the graduate student volunteers, the awards committee members, and you, the participants, for sacrificing your time and energy to make the Rhetoric Society of America an intellectual community and a home.

Welcome to Mni Soto Makoce

We are meeting on the homeland of the Dakota people, a land that they refer to as Mni Soto Makoce, "the land of cloudy waters." The Dakota people claim the state as their ancestral and rightful home. In particular, they view the area that sits at the confluence of the Minnesota and Mississippi rivers as the sacred place of life's origin. The first Euro-Americans who arrived here were fur traders who depended on the Dakota people for their livelihood. Unfortunately, by the 1830s, the influx of Christian missionaries, soldiers, and settlers eroded any trust that had existed and sparked conflict. Treaties made with the United States government slowly eroded the Dakota's control of this land. After a devastating war in 1862, the Dakota were victim to the largest mass-hanging in U.S. history and were forcefully exiled from the state. Many have never returned; most regard the treaties ceding their land to have been coerced or broken by state and federal authorities. Today the state is also a homeland to the Ojibwa and Ho-Chunk people, as well as Indigenous peoples from many nations. We acknowledge their claims.

Welcome to Minneapolis

In the 1850s, the mills that dotted the banks of the Mississippi River not only formed the commercial heart of Minneapolis, they were the flour-milling capital of the world. Financial institutions soon followed, providing the funds that made "The Cities" thrive. Today, the concentration of wealth and opportunity in this region has transformed the metro into a modern urban space. United Health, Target, Best Buy, and 3M are just a few of the Fortune 500 companies that exist within a cityscape that contains 60% of the state's population.

Downtown Minneapolis is the home of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, the Guthrie Theater, the Walker Art Museum, and three professional sports teams. Restaurants line Nicollet, Hennepin, and Marquette avenues where one can find a wide variety of food, wine, and craft beer. Yet what makes Minneapolis truly remarkable is that within five miles of its urban center four sizable lakes are nestled among public parks, trees, and pedestrian walkways. Along the eastern edge of downtown, the Mississippi River flows inexorably toward New Orleans.

Many of the people who live in Minneapolis and St. Paul bear little resemblance to the fictional characters of "Lake Wobegon" or Fargo. African Americans, including Dred Scott and his wife Harriet, arrived at Fort Snelling in the service of army officers throughout the 1830s and '40s. After the Civil War, more African Americans moved to the region looking for a new start. The Cities became a primary destination for the Hmong people who fled Laos and Vietnam in the wake of the Vietnam War. The Cities sustain a thriving LGBTQ community, made possible by people like Allan Spear, the first openly gay man to serve in a U.S. state legislature. Elected in 1972, Spear eventually served more than ten years as the Senate Speaker and was instrumental in amending Minnesota's Human Rights Act to include LGBTQ communities (1993). Most recently, Minnesota has become the home of the largest Somali population in the United States.

Today, Minneapolis is in the midst of its own re-invention. It is a thriving urban landscape, but it is also a city wrestling with the challenges of its past and present. The city boasts one of the lowest unemployment rates in the country, but racial income gaps have widened over the course of five decades. The city is growing faster today than it has since 1950, but there is less affordable housing now than there was 15 years ago. Minneapolis resident Ilhan Omar is a national celebrity, the first Somali-American Muslim lawmaker in the United States, but the shooting of Philando Castile during a routine traffic stop demonstrates how easily people of color still become the victim of state-sanctioned violence.

Progress and setbacks, continuity and change, these are the hallmarks of Minneapolis and the very reason why (re)invention is so necessary today. These are also the elements that we face as an academic association. RSA has challenges ahead — from the problem of retaining its intimacy in an ever-larger organization, to the opportunity of becoming a vibrant voice in the public conversation about rhetoric, to increasing our inclusiveness — but RSA has the scholars, the organization, and the will to do these things. We can't think of a better city in which to assemble as we consider rhetoric's part in moments of celebration, transformation, invention.

CONVENTION POLICIES AND PRACTICES

Accessibility

RSA makes all reasonable efforts to facilitate the full participation of individuals with disabilities. Please consult the conference Accessibility Guide on the RSA website or on the conference app for more information. The Accessibility Guide is located online here: https://rhetoricsociety.org/aws/RSA/asset_manager/get_file/209325?ver=26.

Appropriate and Professional Behavior

In order to maintain a professional and comfortable environment for its members, conference registrants, and staff, the RSA requires certain standards of behavior. These standards include, without limitation, courtesy of discourse, respect for the diversity of RSA members and conference attendees, and the ability to conduct RSA business and participate in its conference in a nonthreatening, collegial atmosphere. RSA members and conference participants who do not uphold these standards may jeopardize their membership in the Society. Individuals who engage in harassment of other members of RSA or members of the hotel and convention staff will be asked to leave the conference. If you have any questions, please speak to RSA's Executive Director, Jerry Hauser; the Conference Co-Director, Kirt Wilson; or the President of the Rhetoric Society of America, Greg Clark.

All Gender Restrooms

RSA is pleased to offer "all gender" restrooms located on the second floor near the Symphony 1 Ballroom. Anyone may choose to use these restrooms. Please look for the designating signage.

Consent to Use of Photographic Images

Registration and attendance at or participation in RSA's meetings and other activities constitutes an agreement by the registrant to RSA's use and distribution (both now and in the future) of the registrant or attendee's image in photographs, video recordings, and electronic reproduction of such events and activities.

Social Media

If you are a Twitter user, the conference hashtag is #rsa50. You also may want to follow the conference's Twitter account @rhetsoc.

Conference App

The free conference mobile app is available by going to the rhetoricsociety.org webpage or searching for "RSA Conference 2018" in the Apple App and Android stores. Note that the application is categorized as a "phone" application; consequently, it may not appear in a search for tablet apps. Finally, the log-in for this app is distinct from the credentials you use as an RSA Member, so please do not use the password that grants you access to rhetoricsociety.org or the conference submission website.

Audio Visual Policy

Thanks to the generous support of our sponsors, all presentation rooms will be equipped with a standard conference AV package. That package includes: wifi, screen, AC cable, projector, stand, and a VGA cable (for connecting to a laptop). Presenters must provide their own laptops and any other equipment they wish to use during their presentations. Mac users must provide their own adapters.
