

Rhetoric With Aristotle

Third Annual Interactive Rhetoric Symposium

Oxford, England

July 20-25, 2015

At the Middlebury Centre for Medieval and Renaissance Studies (CMRS)

Co-Chairs

Prof. James J. Murphy
Professor Emeritus of Rhetoric,
University of California, Davis

Dr. Nicholas Crowe
Sometime Dean, Centre for Medieval and Renaissance Studies, Oxford

Priming Speakers

Tuesday

James J. Murphy

Wednesday

Malcolm Heath

Thursday

Mike Edwards

Friday

Nicholas Crowe

Friday

“Parliamentary Debate”

PROF. JAMES J. MURPHY	University of California, Davis
PROF. MALCOLM HEATH	University of Leeds, United Kingdom
PROF. MIKE EDWARDS	Roehampton University, London
DR. NICHOLAS J. CROWE	Centre for Medieval and Renaissance Studies

PARTICIPANTS LIMITED TO 20

Qualified applicants will be notified as accepted.

Total Fee, including registration, most meals including closing dinner at Keble College, and accommodation in the heart of Oxford, is £650.

Total fee payable at time of acceptance.

Applications online only. For information and registration details contact

Dr. Bernard Gowers, Senior Tutor: bgowers@middlebury.edu

Background: Each Rhetoric Symposium features four “Priming Speakers” whose remarks are analyzed through immediate direct responses, through group discussions, and through ongoing Research Groups culminating in a parliamentary debate to choose a single Proposition embodying the concepts studied. The first Symposium in 2012 with 20 participants from seven countries discussed “Rhetoric in the Twenty-First Century.” Proceedings are in press with Cambridge Scholars Press. A scheduling problem forced a lull in 2013, but in 2014 there were 17 participants from five continents who took on the subject “Rhetoric in Time and Space.”

