Timing

Introduction (1:00 pm ET)

Welcome to today's #SAVIRscientists Twitter chat. We are talking about how injury research is preventing injuries and saving lives.

To participate in the chat, use & follow #SAVIRscientists

Questions

1:01 pm Q1: Introduce yourself. How did you or your organization get started in injury & violence prevention research and/or why is this topic important to you?

1:06 pm Q2: Injury researchers work in collaboration with communities most affected by injury and violence problems to determine solutions. How are injury researchers partnering with communities in your area to make a difference?

Timing, continued

1:11 pm Q3: What injury issues have increased during the pandemic and how have injury scientists been working to address these in their communities?

1:16 pm Q4: Conducting scientific research during the COVID-19 pandemic has been challenging in many ways. What GIF or other image (please share) illustrates what it has been like for you?

1:21 pm Q5: How are injury scientists addressing equity and structural racism that affects injuries & violence across the lifespan?

1:26 pm Q6: In what ways have injury scientists adapted initiatives/approaches to better reach vulnerable populations?

1:31 pm Q8: What are some examples of injury science making an impact?

1:36 pm Q9: How can we as a field ensure the next generation of injury researchers is trained and supported in their work?

1:41 pm Q10: If you are attending next week's #SAVIR2022 conference, what is something you are looking forward to?

Closing and Thank You
